Supporting better communication in MS care

At EMD Serono, we believe that improving patient-healthcare provider communication is essential for optimizing the care and treatment experience of people living with MS.

Over the last 10 years, our parent company, Merck KGaA, Darmstadt, Germany has been bringing together an elite group of the world's leading MS specialists and patient advocates, to co-create programs with this specific goal in mind. We are delighted to now be able to share the outputs from this initiative, MS in the 21st Century (MS21), with the MS community in the US.

There are so many needs within the MS patient population that it really does take a village to try and meet them. By working collaboratively - with patients and healthcare providers on a level playing field - we can really facilitate change and help people with MS live better lives.

Amanda Montague, Chief Mission Officer,
Multiple Sclerosis Association of America (MSAA)
MS21 member since 2020

NEW from MS21

As a person with MS, should I get vaccinated against COVID-19?

With the availability of COVID-19 vaccinations increasing globally, many in the multiple sclerosis (MS) community are asking for answers to two key questions; is the vaccine safe for me, and do I need to make any changes to my treatment plan?

Currently the supply of peer-reviewed data on the topic of MS and COVID-19 vaccinations is limited; however, in contrast, there is a vast amount of (often conflicting) online conversation, causing confusion and concern for the MS community.
